THE SEARCH FOR A PEACE FORM

The world is just now in an obvious and a deadly perplex word on millions of lips, and even those who are clamouring fo finish "hasten to explain that their aim is a peace that will save another such catastrophe as the present. From all the combeven from the Reichstag, come formulae that are professedly de the basis upon which the fabric of an enduring peace may opens the way of escape, and while the desire for peace is man except among the profiteers and the reactionaries, the people go hands of a remorseless fate, making ready for further years of sang The peace formulae, whatever the motives of their authors, has common. They all pretend, at least, to conform to that "fo set out by the Pope as the foremost of his proposals namely, the moral force of right should replace the material force of are the peace-makers come to define what is "right" their definition as their interests. Even the Allies are not agreed. When declares against the economic boycott of the German pe Cecil gives a lecture upon the economic boycott as a will When President Wilson speaks of a "League of Nations" national law and justice after the war, Sir Edward Carson college. down "the platitudes" spoken about the League of Natio Grey had endorsed. There is an evident confusion about the councils of the Allies, an acknowledged confusion, for the Conference, from which, however, America will be absent, is move that confusion. Simultaneously, there is to be noted a cratic distrust all over Europe regarding the capacity and even the hereditary diplomatic caste to which is entrusted the target of target of the target of target of the target of ta Stockholm was the expression of this distrust, as Wash

In this situation there comes a new suggestion. The publish to-day from Mr. Austin Harrison is designed to introdupublic anidea to which he had given publicity in the pages of the "Er The idea does not seem to have gripped the British public, thou worthy people have given it their adhesion. From Mr. Harris clear that he thinks Ireland may prove a more fruitful soil. The maze of slaughter and confusion according to Mr. Harrison is to the war is being waged, the Allied nations should undertake am the task of formulating those ideas of justice and of right, who merely determine all the questions raised by the present strug the empires at war, but be the law of the future to the world. This," Mr. Harrison believes, "decisively and at once. If m pretation of justice, then mind must be the tribunal. In playworld seeks justice, process givilisation, then the world. world seeks justice, peace, civilisation, then the world must principles of the world in an International Magna Charta. is a courageous, if not a gigantic one. To realise, it obviously wide machinery. Mr. Harrison's suggestion is that, instead of Chancelleries and War Offices to produce such a result—an sceptical as to their capacity—the Allied Powers should call Men and Elders," the jurists and moralists, and proceed separ same time in co-operation, to prepare the International Magnatermarkable that such a proposal should emanate just now has been so active a propagandist in favour of the effective power. But Mr. Harrison believes that the production of such charter would an effective war measure. It would remove friction and ineffective co-operation from among the Allies the a decisive incident on the German mind.

Mr. Harrison recognises the natural surprise that will to that in the present juncture an appeal should be specially made to a lead in the endorsement of his proposal. Ireland is pre-occurrence difficulties. The minds of all the saner elements in Ireland upon the Convention, and the hopes that have begun to g Convention. The invitation to turn in a new direction for a difficulties while these hopes remain will undoubtedly cause Harrison appears to feel that the contemptuous terms in which Whig "referred to the work of the Convention portend failure "Northern Whig" is, of course, in close touch with some of tial members of the Belfast delegation, and may possibly standard good judges still believe that "the waste-paper basket" of the Convention but for the will be needed, not for the work of the Convention, but for the enemies of Irish peace. Upon one point, of course, Mr. Har correct. With the idea of an international code carrying in between States and peoples the principles of justice, freedor great mass of the Irish people will heartily sympathise. But derstand, in their detachment and out of their experience, there a scepticism regarding the noble professions of the war-makers. perhaps, exaggerate the rocks in Mr. Harrison's path. The must acknowledge. The machinery for their removal mi especially if the existing Governments are to be moved to There may, perhaps, be abroad in the world of to-day such a to which the appeal of pure justice and right reason is now a will overcome the inertia of the professional diplomats. Be mighty effort to organise that opinion to the point of effective often the case with ideas of the magnitude of Mr. Harrison's machinery is here vital.

at their face value, for it states that, "if it is found that a misuse has been made of the facilities Sweden permitted Germany, an explanation will be asked of Berlin." This opens the way to an understanding. Sweden, in time, will find that misuse has been made of these facilities, and will ask Germany to explain. Possibly such an explanation will never be made, for it is difficult to see how the German Foreign Office could admit that it has acted so abominably. A writer in the Pall Mall Gazette to night states that he is told by a City friend that he has rarely known commercial circles more excited than they were yesterday by the revelations concerning the sinking of Argentine vessels. The real shock, however, came from the disclosure of the perfidy of certain high Swedish officials.

Another friend, who has travelled widely through Sweden, confirmed this. He added: Republics seem to be the order of the day, and I should not be surprised to see a great effort made by the Republican Party in Sweden, which is stronger than many people imagine, to throw over the Monarchy. The pronounced pro-Garnanism of the Sweath Court is pro-Germanism of the Sweensh Court is by no means popular in the country."

A new peace offer from Germany is imminent, according to a Geneva newspaper, and it will be due to the efforts made by German financiers. These people are said to be pressing the German Government to use the recent successes in Russia as a lever for propounding new terms. From the United States there is also a rumour that Germany is throwing out feelers through the agency of Von Kuhlmann, the Kaiser's new Foreign Secretary, and attached to the rumour is with Britain controlling the English Channel until the Channel tunnel is built. This rumour is much too good to be true, for, if correct, it would open up the way to a conference out of which good might come, though we could never consent to the final clause. The seas have always been free to the world under Great Britain, and we could never admit anything else. Still, the suggestion that such terms have been mooted is interesting.

A remarkable long distance flight has just been accomplished by an Italian aviator, Captain Julius Laureati, from Turin to Naples and back. The two cities are about 450 miles apart, but owing to detours taken by the aviator, the distance flown was little short of one thousand miles. The feat was carried through without a landing or route. A new type of biplane, built in Turin, and fitted with a water-cooled engine, was used. The time was ten hours and thirty minutes, showing an average speed of nearly ninety miles per hour. Conditions were good on the outward journey, and had on the return. The flight is a world record.

Some remarkable scenes, for a court of law, were witnessed this afternoon at the Old Bailey when Lieutenant Malcolm was acquitted. When the jury announced its werdict of "not guilty," the words were greeted with loud cheers, the people in the court rising and shouting frantically. Outside the court a very large crowd had assembled to wait for the verdict, and when the news of acquittal became known there was a most enthusiastic demonstra-

R. Campbell, of the Department of Agriculture, and Mr. Charles O'Conor, of the Local Government Board, were also present. It was the intention of the Cowkeepers' and Dairymens' Association to have been represented at the meeting, but that intention was abandoned.

The conference was not open to the representatives of the Press, but at its close Dr. Sherlock, Chairman of the Public Health Committed, continuated a short account of the proceedings. The Committee, he said, had adopted the principle of municipal milk depots, and had decided to meet from day to day, in order to rush forward the business. They had asked the Trades Council, the Women's National Army Group of Crown Prince Ruppreaht—The artillery battle in Flanders increased temporarily to great intensity on the coasts and in the Ypres salient.

Advances by the English to the south-teast-of Langemarck, to the north of Fresenberg, were repulsed.

Near Villeret, to the north-west of St. Quentin, fresh fighting developed early this morning, which ended in our favour.

Army Group of the German Crown Prince—Reterprises by French reconnoiting detachments, mostly preceded by violent artillery p. reparations, were frustrated to the north-west of Rheims, and in several sectors of the Chamberton of the Chamberton French forces yesterday morning attacked from Fosses Wood to Chaulme Wood. Ennemy forces, which had penetrated into our fighting sone to the south of Wavrille Wood, were regulated by a counter-attack. On the re-mainder of the front the French storming waves broke down with heavy losses under our defensive fire.
